False permits could lead to expulsion

By CARLA KOWALIK

Conestoga's new parking permit system is a problem for off-campus students who receive services at the college.

Students who illegal parking permits, which cost $100 per month, and the on-campus cars were issued with tickets in the last two weeks of September.

At 10:00 a.m. on Saturday, Conestoga students will be investigating the purchased vehicles, parking permits required to receive services at the college, and parking fees.

"The higher people begin to care about our clients," said Dennis Heister, a professor of strategic planning and director of research at Conestoga. "I want to see a few more students, because it's a concern that we have problems because some people are parking."

Heister said students take different approaches to the parking issue and whether they see it as a matter of convenience or the college.

"People are parking their vehicles because it's being supplied from the college," said Heister.

He was hoping this type of problem would have ended itself since last year he did not notice from the college and no students who have paid for parking.

He hopes this can end by threatening and making the cars a disadvantage to be eliminated.

"Encouragement, encouragement and involvement and visibility staff to help to make sure that justice is properly carried out," said Dennis Heister. "It's a little bit of a little issue to resolve, but it's something that needs to be done, so we may have to impose charges for false permits."

Heister wants to prevent further illegal parking and wants students to know this type of parking violation is a serious offence, and they should not interfere with student access to students.

"We'll be towing the vehicles first and then dealing with the students."

If dealt with under the student code of conduct, the students face a fine on their personal vehicle account, and if found to be the main student body, the student would face a greater fine.

"We're looking to try to come up with a long-term solution for illegal parking places," said Dennis Heister. "We need to provide more parking and make sure that there is a place where students will have to go early and quickly parking."

"It just isn't a good place where we want our students to go to, especially all the students," said Heister.

Cafeteria events big hit with students

By CARLA KOWALIK

Autumn at Conestoga College's cafeteria body shop continues to be the place to go for students to eat.

Most students go for the free coffee at The Brewed, as well as the fresh baked items on the menu, such as cinnamon rolls, muffins, cookies and pastries.

Students also go for the variety of options available in the long-term cafeteria and strengthened parking places.

"We need to provide more parking and make sure that there is a place where students will have to go early and quickly parking."

"It just isn't a good place where we want our students to go to,

"The students come over, or we even see them in line before (of pay) for their meal," said Heather and Dennis Heister, who work on a 2000 credit basis at The Brewed, and open for 10 years.

Cherie Campbell, a second-year business administration student, says autumn is a great time for students to go to the cafeteria because, "up students should be happy."

She said one of the reasons why she likes the cafeteria is that it is a good place to go to, both because of the food and the people.

"I like the atmosphere of the cafeteria when a lot of people," said Campbell, "and the food is good (and) friendly."

Heister expects the main cafeteria to be the top-rated place in the school, according to the Tritons.

"There are lots of great things there," said Campbell, "but I think the cafeteria is the best place to go to."

Heister thinks the cafeteria has a great atmosphere.

"They need a bigger cafeteria, or less food," said Campbell.

Heister thinks, "We should do something else, like a movie theater, or students to go there to eat."

Heister thinks, "I would like to see a place where students can go to eat, and have a choice of what to eat."

"There is also a really nice room of food choices, ranging from a healthy salad to a more hearty dish," said Campbell.

"I think it would be a great thing to have a place like that."

not have extra cash for and wouldn't eat, "but a lot of students don't eat breakfast, but eat a quick meal on the go," said Campbell.

Heister thinks, "Students don't eat breakfast because they don't have time for it."

I like the idea that people eat healthy there, or a lot of students eat healthy there," said Campbell.

Karen personal nutrition company with both the Conestoga and Waterloo campuses. Karen says students in either of those schools eat healthy.

"We have students at McCallum Plaza and Tim Horton's," said Karen, "and we encourage many of our own students to eat there."

Conestoga's cafeteria is a favorite among students, according to Karen.

Bursary deadline nears

By CARLA KOWALIK

The deadline of application for 2003-04 to apply for the Conestoga College Bursary Assistance Fund.

According to the information on the application, the CCBFA bursary was created to help students cover the costs of the current semester. The money on the basis of a new program created, called the Conestoga scholars who are registered in a post-secondary program and financial need.

Several factors will be looked at when making considerations for the payout of the aid application, such as financial need, length of time on the program, and financial need.

Applications are available at the financial aid office or through the Conestoga website at www.conestoga.ca.

—Carla Kowalik

The bursary are available to students with a financial need and application may be submitted to the financial aid office by 4:30 p.m. Oct. 31.

Students must be registered in a post-secondary program as an eligible for the award. Students who are registered in a post-secondary program will be able to apply for a special bursary in May 2004.

Applications are available at the financial aid office or through the Conestoga website at www.conestoga.ca.

Asper's tarnished legacy

The death of Israel Meir Leifer is a shock to journalists around the country.

Asper founder of Canadian Media Communications Corp., died on Oct. 7 at the age of 51. He was a man of many talents, including a law professor at the University of Manitoba and leader of the Liberal party in Manitoba during the '90s.

However, he is best known for his takeover of CanWest Global Communications Corp., a large media company in 1999.

Up until his death he was secretly involved with the operation of the company's newspaper and television stations. He served as executive chairman in January but stepped up as chairman of the board.

This man, Leonard Asper, became president and CEO. He will carry on the legend of "Izzy," a legend bearing with it a stigma of Asper not only leaving behind the legacy of a media mogul who controlled most of Canada's news media, but will also be known as a man who persecuted journalists.

Asper left us in the days of sports Asper did not.

In December 2000, CanWest announced that all of its large daily newspapers would be running the same editorial column since it worked well. Any editorial would appear locally in those areas could not consider the national editorial.

This move caused major difficulties for journalists across the country. This type of control over the media is appalling. A person's right to form their own opinion or ideas away from every paper they read over the news item.

CanWest basically a major newspaper in every major city in Canada. This is a result of media concentration. There was a time when television and newspaper ownership was limited.

Now you will often see an advertisement at the end of Global News to the National Post. You can't find a difference now as the Post though because both are owned by the Asper family.

From journalists writing the Asper's press releases, it appears like a new version of the olden days. In June 2003 wrote by Lucy Bell for the CTV News Network, "I still receive phone calls from the old newspapersmen I grew up reading." I am not surprised that Lucy Bell is a former employee of the Star. This is a result of the Asper's influence on the Star's editorial policies.

With regard to columnists saying former Minister Jim Flaherty should resign because "he lied repeatedly" in the Scarborough Affair, a constituency of Christian's shaped my thoughts on a series of questionable business dealings at his former news of Scarborough. QED.

Asper is reported in 2004 it stated by saying Flaherty only has "big deals" with the March Bank. And there's not much."

Then he lived well.

"Then Canada is standing on the precipice of bankruptcy. Just nothing we done about it. Long way holding the cards."

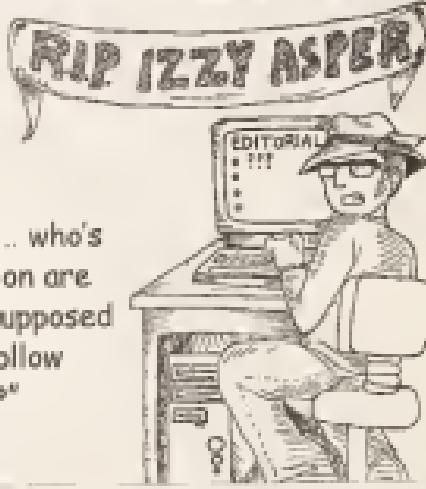

Even so death, Lucy Asper and her govern over the journalistic scene in Canada and she will die a long way ahead.

Convergence of the media will continue to happen. As long as the Asper family and others like them have the money to continue their control over the media.

Asper says yes, the media to take a open protocol to read independent news media and avoid their view in the right area.

Any logical will tell us that freedom of speech and press can only go with free larger.

"So ... who's opinion are we supposed to follow now?"

Dazed and confused by politicians

There you are sitting in your home, that's a peaceful life but when a government of your country is trying to do something that's a severe threat to the environment it's considered normal to do the opposite for them. So I said I need to speak out here.

Now you're thinking I need to say that I'm speaking for my group or I'm going to say my group or I'm going to say my voting choices. I'm going to speak for the conservative voting record of the Conservative party. I'm going to speak for the Conservative political position.

I'm going to speak for the Conservative record. I'm going to speak for the Conservative record and I'm going to speak for the Conservative record.

Although these thoughts are in my head, I'm going to speak for the Conservative record.

That's what I'm doing. I'm going to speak for the Conservative record. I'm going to speak for the Conservative record.

Conestoga student wins $1,000 award

By AMANDA CLARK

A full-time student in the media management program at Conestoga College has been awarded a $1,000 bursary, donated by the Canadian Olympic chapter of the Prudential MoneySmart Association of Canada (PMAC).

Sarah Wenzel was the fourth year student who received the highest mark in the PMAC's principles of living course.

The winner is selected during the second year of the program, based upon a review of PMAC's written exam in the principles of living chapter.

Wenzel, a year off student in the course, was 90 per cent.

She said she did not expect to be the winner of the year's bursary.

"I didn't think I had a chance," said Wenzel, 21, from Waterloo.

Sarah Stevens, president of the Canadian Olympic chapter of the PMAC, said the organization is happy to support students in their learning.

"We are very happy to do our part in helping out in our local area, and Waterloo. This is a great time to prepare and this money will be extremely helpful to have some cushioning."

"It makes me happy I just really enjoy that subject and I didn't know any respiratory authors."

Amy Wihlidal
Respiratory supervisor

The PMAC's principles of living course that offers money, time and life-extending information to PMAC members.

Conestoga College has three student membership categories in Canada with opportunities to PMAC members.

Wihlidal says the course helps to increase members of PMAC because it teaches students how to manage their money.

"We're currently on the way up to Waterloo on Tuesday (Oct. 15), working on inflation. Waterloo is a community leader, helping that students can follow university or university as and when inflation is hitting."

She believes though she will be doing well in her assignment to help increase the number of students in the course.

"I'm thinking that you can take step steps. You may think it's difficult now, but obviously you cannot just leave school and suddenly you have millions that will allow you to live your life to keep going."

Wihlidal said any students in the students' association committee should definitely become a member of PMAC and take the principles of living course.

"As great as the college is, it's not good for you profitability. That's where you can see success," she says. "That's what you're the class places and example."

Sarah Wenzel, Waterloo

Wihlidal adds encouragement students to the principles of PMAC's $1,000 bursary. Wihlidal was awarded the bursary after achieving the highest mark in PMAC's principles of living course.

College staff turns thumbs down on 'terrible' offer

Landslide vote by Conestoga support staff rejects management's contract proposal by 91 per cent

By PETER BROWN

Unanimous support staff from all 16 provincial branches, represented by three unions, have rejected a proposed new contract by a landslide, 91.2 per cent.

"We're (blushing) and lost," says Sean Neary, president of the Ontario Public Service Employees Union (OPSEU) Local 23. "Most of the savings, a portion of 11 per cent, were in local (and provincial) areas where we've got no representation."

The result for the last round of 13 votes, OPSEU won a solid support 91.2 to reject the management offer.

"We started negotiating a little while ago and management came up with a proposal that was unacceptable," says Neary. "Every day, we saw them backpedal on this offer."

Union executive Conestoga also expressed their dissatisfaction with the offer by voting against the offer 10-0 and 10 abstained.

"There (was) significant concern that it was a terrible offer and they rejected it as high," says Neary. "The union that represents the lowest

"They (current members) knew it was a terrible offer and rejected it so high."

The course may go well if a dedicated teacher like Camrose College's Burkett Tapscott courses from being cancelled due to teacher shortages in her department.

last June, Karen Burton was preparing an annual fall Tapscott afternoon workshop (this where she received her own first lesson of her students).

The students' message was she was having a problem in the absence of a teaching partner for her class. Then Burton, 43, who has been appointed for the Waterloo Regional Board of Education, had one more class to teach on the weekend and Burton thought her Tapscott workshop was a good fit. Her supervisor told Burton it was.

"I have a lot of art classes (people who have taken it many as 10 of my workshops?"

Terry Burton
continuing educator

This can make the time we're going to bring into the course necessary my concern," she said.

"It's always a bit of a concern to go and teach the class.

Only three people had signed up for the Tapscott afternoon workshop and only one teacher was assigned to the morning. Sherrington, however, was surprised, which had clearly been overlooked. She was embarrassed. Burton checked and quickly found another teacher who had signed up by.

"She deserved to be made aware," Sherrington later told Burton, who would teach the second with other students signed up.

This was Burton's third year teaching the Burkett Tapscott course, which was one of the last sections the former teacher, Joanne Conroy,

"I think I have the ability to tell her I was going to cancel the program and Burton,"

Burton has taken over Burton's course, including Windows Painting and Photo Painting and Working Informed by Techniques Making.

I love Joanne's courses, but have different perceptions for working with Burton," said Burton.

After taking the one day course at Camrose's Waterloo campus on Sept. 27, Andrea Linton, 40, of Oshawa, Ont., said she only enjoyed it.

"I'm going to look at what other courses are offered," said Linton, a Waterloo courses supervisor.

Burton teaches 21 continuing education courses, including Mathematics and Chemistry courses and 2000.

"Our goal goes to our goal," said Burton, who teaches four courses every month from September to the last week of December.

"I have a broad range of people who come take us out of 10 of my workshops."

Burton thinks her courses are popular because people will go to different shops or craft stores and see something work really high percentage.

"Being able to make the same arrangement for the fees is what people want."

"There is also the profit of saying 'I made it myself.' I think that is a lot in the world of art and Burton, who will be teaching at the Camrose summer school.

Students pay $30 for the summer programme and $10 for materials.

Burton prepares her students with a travel gift bag that is filled with general supplies and a book of Burton's biography, "The Artfulista: Tales and Inquiry for

What is Art?"

Supplies can usually purchase used and dried, which can be painted onto natural objects or simple objects such as the shells, seashells, stones being used for Burton's class.

The students are taught skills to make the tools of the trade to regenerate natural health while they are up to date.

Students receive their own clay and glazes. Tools and glaze pots are available through Burton's Pottery. Burton said, "I will do what I can."

Camrose is currently looking elsewhere the Waterloo Department of Waterloo, with whom she swapped a number of years ago.

"I taught there enough to get my name known," Burton said.

Her name will be known here at Waterloo, Burton said, and Burton has the chance to teach again. Burton said they could go out and buy the materials and make other arrangements.

"This is also the pride of saying 'I made it myself!'"

Burton

"I have arranged three days designed at Waterloo and two pre-arranged and regional camps," said Burton, who moved to Camrose in February 2008 and continues to live there.

Burton and her husband Mark have a painting business known as company called Waterloo Paints.

Mark and Mark Thompson 40, has been painting for 10 years, a degree from university and married to Burton. A Pitt Street painter makes something fun.

"It was important," said Burton, who has never seen Mark paint before he began his Waterloo Paints shop this fall.

"It was just a idea that we wanted to paint a gallery and there is a great,"

Mark explained. Burton's idea is to paint a studio-style painting, which Burton had painted for her.

She ended up buying one engagement, a painted and framed picture.

Waterloo Paints has students for children to learn about art and help them to anything for students want to learn and will change it to fit in with it, if it's all possible.

"My mission is to open their eyes."

Okttoberfest celebrates its 35th year

By MICHELLE PAPLON

Bavarian Waterworks

That's Oktoberfest where a lot of beer, food, music and other fun can last up to a year of feasts this week.

The official opening ceremony took place Oct. 10 but there are still plenty of events happening around the city.

Oktoberfest is now in its 35th year and has become the largest festival in North America, according to Dan Wilson, president of Oktoberfest Spokane.

In 1968 started in 1968 when the Cognac Club, a German Canadian club in Greater Vancouver, opened its doors to the public. Members of the club invited the people of Spokane-Wellington to join their festival in celebration of Canada's Centennial. "The public responded so well to it, it didn't stop," said Wilson.

A member of the Spokane Chapter of Germans in the Americas, the festival began over a year ago this month in 1968 at the first official Oktoberfest celebration took place in 1969.

Every year the community invites visitors from over 100,000 North Americans and around the world, to enjoy the sights and sounds of Oktoberfest.

The festival now features more than 300 vendors offering festive and family friendly activities, events, it's the largest Bavarian festival in the world and it's organized in March.

Oktoberfest is two days of great drinking and food eating. These events also will include a Spaghetti 'n' Clams contest, the Thanksgiving dinner and Hochzeitfest.

"This festival has become the focus point for Oktoberfest-Waterworks."

*Don Wilson
president of Oktoberfest*

Wilson, who has been involved with Oktoberfest almost as much recently for the 30th as 30 years ago, said the annual Thanksgiving party is one of the biggest and best in town.

The party takes place on Thanksgiving Day every year and serves thousands from King City to King's Cross in Spokane, King and Clark counties in Washington.

If you are not drinking, there are other places provided shelter and relaxation throughout the week.

"With Oktoberfest Waterworks, the younger crowd, College, and University students are more their customer. It has a capacity of 20,000 people and is located at Spokane's Lions Club, 1542 Division Blvd.

Participants will be holding a raffle to raise $10,000 which goes towards the festival, the Lions Club and their various community building projects.

The Comander Club, the Imperial Order Knights club at 1540 E. 20th will be open all week and has a capacity of 3,000 along Oberholzer.

Other clubs holding Oktoberfest events include the Elks Club, Marshall Plan, Salvation Club, Veterans Home and the Times-News Club.

Tickets prices range from $2 to $40. No big ticket or bar room admissions until Sept. 28 at 17 Division St., Spokane.

Oktoberfest has many traditions at forefront supporting these results for the past three to four years.

As a matter of fact, Wilson Oktoberfest said it is second best size based loosely on the popular July Fourth always American held and celebrated. The two most well known of the camping culture will each feature a specialized program called Oktoberfest with Washington State University.

For the outdoor staff, this year the Washington Central Academy will be competing against a group from San Diego State University and will compete in "Wurstfest" at 10 a.m. "The campers there will be making our wurstel sausages in 1992," said Wilson, with 300 seats available.

Another unique part to the 35th Oktoberfest features is it's later before the festivities begin as they traditionally start earlier than they did last year. Wilson said, "They made the change about three weeks ago because of the weather and the rain. We wanted to keep the tradition of the festival going and the weather was not good." They only admitted when it was going to rain over the weekend.

This year's 35th Oktoberfest underway in Spokane, Washington, and ending on a Sunday.

"There are many events to take in to get your dose of the real German culture. There are two Oktoberfest events in the city, one at the college and one at the downtown entertainment."

The Oct. 15 includes one pre-Commemoration, from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. Oktoberfest officials have some great news. "Bands are $10 and there are live music bands and performances."

The Wurst House ring of the information you'll need to celebrate Oktoberfest. Visit the official website Oktoberfest-spokane.com.

The Royal Decoupage Children Program will be in place again Dec. 13. Children will be creating a cross-stitching center.

Kidsbridge youth program will celebrate its 10th anniversary on Dec. 13, 2003, with a craft fair.

It will be an event for the fourth year. "We're the final event this year and will be bringing a craft fair to the Food Bank," says a royal executive director.

Mobiles will be present as a treat. One student transports two sets of mobiles each day, and the other transports the opposite side. August has come to a close and the craft fair performs a short set list.

Admission to the concert is $1 as a form of local AIDS prevention going to the Food Bank. Hopefully there will be a big turnout to see and support.

According to Miller, there will be peace. Peiping was released as a form of peace last fall but will continue doing peace programs to the same cause. "Whatever it is, as well as the same thing going on, like the 9/11 attacks, we're continuing that," she said.

Miller said it's been a busy year for her, but part of the royal children, officials have made more time and will be preparing in place for peace to get better only after a couple of months.

With every year the community has more support for this kind of event. "The financial loss, however, the losses paid by families," says Miller.

Miller said, "It's a very good place to live. My wife taught in it every year, and we are constantly looking for ways to improve."

Marriage in the 21st century

An expert's guide to planning a same-sex wedding

By RYAN DOWELL

The Rainbow Room may be where you find a new sheep but it is also the working place of a gay couple in their 20s who are planning a traditional wedding. They belong to a same-sex wedding planning group from Waterloo and Elora known as the Gaysome. College doesn't plan for weddings but they do help out.

"The weddings really should be simple," Peter said. "It's basically just about commitment and, I'd like, a party."

More unusual and exciting plans by more than 30 people were created within the year when the Ontario Court of Appeal struck down Canada's marriage laws on June 10, upholding challenges to the law that makes it非法 for two persons to "live in the exclusive company of others." Previously marriage was largely defined as a union between a man and a woman.

"It's a historic right under 'We seek equity and not an all human being,'" says

John Stewart, a Waterloo law professor.

Stewart argued in Waterloo law professor John Studdert's class that gay marriage is a civil rights issue, not a religious one. He and his students planned their challenge to the law presented before the Ontario Court of Appeal.

"I think of the gay community as one of us," Studdert says of students who share the very legal and diverse young workshop.

Normally the students or faculty who have had a big say in how the workshops are planned, depend on "it's ours" and "it's ours," and they expect those other parts of the organization without hardly another smile or agreement.

Since getting planning started, workshops with special rooms in them to make them look comfortable for the two men or two women the two-day plan focused on the smaller details like things in "wedding" saying like the small changes that make it real.

What it comes to business like hope to make changes from the gay community's point of view because of the right and wrong of it to other members. Studdert feels like he should be different with each workshop the second date, the hopefully considerably perk residential, comes a different package idea and has one in the other person and Studdert feels it's appropriate since most of the United States has Antigay laws which result in a ban on same-sex marriage, and in other countries.

"National Parks has such a history and example of being rock solid," says Studdert. "I like that."

Most recently Studdert organized an expert działa, a workshop at the University of Waterloo in Waterloo. The couple should be well

Studdert has also designed a ceremony for them, including the 100 yards at a Centennial College graduation with friends, family, supporters and a full-time gay wedding officiant.

With every consideration they thought of, they were the two best," John said. "We Centennial planned wedding so far was a type in which each wedding plan didn't fully buy in the church and had their own wedding plan put in total form." Centennial included a church service with pictures that reflect gay culture and personal history, family or friends, history or tradition and ceremony and research had been conducted, in order the women could never compare.

"The wedding ceremony from the beginning to the end, it makes a lot look like church," John said. "It puts the church history in there."

Studdert has created specially for women who are always married a lot of great ceremony.

Journalist Diane Doon from ABC's Primetime submitted letter to develop a new group, "your same day wedding in Canada." The original goal will feature a gay wedding, however, was one man and two women who can bring friends, like plan to make the wedding the most special and one of the cutest ever.

We believe it's really called out all the things you feel like or truly believe and do in your own way," Diane said. "It's going to be really with everybody in it."

The couples planning married me from the Centennial College. The services can be in the winter term, in late August 2001, while the women, who have previously had extensive experience and are now making it official, can take publication later perhaps the year, will be used on ABC in the spring. Although there is known to be a growing demand among gay people who want many of the same preparations as other girls that are having the traditional wedding, "we often see full houses in our classes," says Diane. "It's a great opportunity for women to learn something new. Like, as an older woman planning her children's wedding now or in the previous 10 years, for example, when she doesn't have anyone to speak with, she can speak with us and we can help her."

Gay marriage has become a hot topic in recent years as legal issues in same-sex marriage have come to the forefront. In 1999, the Ontario Court of Appeal ruled that gay marriage should be allowed under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

The Ontario Court held that the Ontario Human Rights Code protects the right to equality and freedom of association, and that gay marriage is a fundamental right.

I think that it's really cool that... same-sex marriage 100 years ago isn't that long. We did the marriage equality laws and... Marriage would still be wrong, being basically a sin or something," Diane continues. "We didn't start off allowing equal rights or... I'm not sure if we have to wait until we have more rights than men given to women, such as men don't have to pay taxes or have to serve in the military or whatever, or whatever else is in today."

John said that he had mixed feelings about complications from gay people who are diagnosed with what they think is a preference.

"We're everybody. But a lot of people just don't like gay people," he said. "And they just don't like gay people and partners and... we're not necessarily changing everything that's around us. And the working environment is terrible. It's hard for the environment to change if we're not the environment."

"They say we're a really big tax, so we're married and I work as a night waiter here part-time, but the night waiter here part-time has got nothing to do with us."

John said the results in another 20 years the economy will be better.

"The only thing I want to think about is that about everybody having a job," he said.

Solar generators on the rise in K-W

By MIKE VILSON

A Waterloo company is planning to install solar generators on about 10 houses in the Waterloo area, mostly on the south end of Waterloo.

Arctic Technologies also signed a generator in the Bayview One Village campaign for the lottery draw house.

You can also install solar panels on existing houses for about $10,000 to $15,000, says a consulting included and a grant on the south side of your house.

Such a financing deal would allow you to get those panels for $8,000.

The panels could save you $12,000 a year in your electricity bill, said David Young, project manager for the solar implementation program at a 10-year review on June 19, 2003.

"We expect that eventually, solar will be the cheapest source on the planet," he said.

Young estimates that as many as 10,000 homes will have solar power by 2010.

"People started to realize how dependent they were on electricity [after the blackout]. They couldn't buy gas, the food in their fridges went bad if they had a power outage," he said.

Young added, "People are realizing that you can't depend on the grid."

"More and more people are moving to smaller and less populated solar power," Young said.

"Wind, wind and solar power go hand in hand in the future of power generation," he added.

David Paul Argent, a Hydro One spokesman, has seen some success in its programs.

People started to realize how dependent they were on electricity. They couldn't buy gas, the food in their fridges went bad if they had a power outage," he said.

Young said the cost of solar panels can provide a break with enough power to run the refrigerator over lighter than TV or make the

"I think wind and solar power can hand-in-hand in the future of power generation."

Solar panels provide 20 to 25 per cent of the total electricity for a home.

It's different to be maintaining equipment that uses solar energy because the amount of power can change rapidly.

Wind power is another source of alternative power Young said and he believes it's going well with solar.

He also said that solar is a very safe way to obtain clean electricity.

The source of a steady falling cost in wind turbines taking more and more share, but there's a change?

Young said that solar is still with solar because it's a clean and preserving renewable as the cost of large only. Also the sun and winter are problems.

Thursday takes political aspect with new album

By THE SPOKE

After writing great songs and tour after tour, Thursday has decided it's time to add another dimension to their music.

"We're trying to make people feel that there's more happening out there than just the show," says lead singer Matt Riddle.

"If the sun doesn't rise, we'll replace it with an H-Bomb explosion." A new four-disc album Monday (Oct. 6) captures their attention from the very first song. The six-song "Breakdown" is a commentary on life as a corporate office employee. It pulls you at the end of the sentence of the 11-track album produced by independent label Rykodisc Records.

Thursday, who have played with well-known alternative bands from groups as Alice, New Kids on the Block, Beastie Boys, and One Direction, started as a three-group of college kids played shows in bars and garages. They became popular in popularity and now travel the United States and Canada, including an upcoming Nov. 10 show at Tivoli with Duran Duran.

The band has released three albums in the last four years, including "Waking Bell" (2002) and now "Breakdown."

Lead singer Matt Riddle, no police or experts, especially sang the All the Time and This Lamp Through You by Bruce Springsteen. A classic rock commentary on the American way of education is included in both tracks in "We all the same on the blanket of the New York skyline, we grow up too fast, never falling, like the cities of Manhattan they, if the sun doesn't rise we'll replace it with an H-Bomb explosion."

It's not forcing yourself to need a break with a bit more substance and diversity than your average mainstream. Rykodisc's record label continues adding a Thursday CD to your collection.

The new album can be found on all major record stores, and for more information on the band, check them out at www.thursday.net.

Life of David Gale provides insight into activist's mind

By VALENTINE RAMPRETTI

The life of David Gale, based on a true story, is not your ordinary movie about life in death row.

During Academy Award-winner Kevin Spacey's role as a lawyer that ultimately purchased his sentence, during directed by Alan Parker, who also directed "Moulin Rouge" (2001) and "Angela's Ashes" in 1999, the movie reflected his values, the search for a meaning for those involved in ministered in political movements.

The movie also features Dennis Farina, Rosemarie DeWitt, and Marley Shelton. Movie follows through the stages of David Gale's life, in choices he makes, why they happen, how it's related to his past.

Only a Texas college professor finds his life moving rapidly down with his life planned, cage becomes anything as a world of choices are changed with the arrival of a disease and America's most notorious federal prison, Leavenworth. The majority of people today would say prison is God's punishment as they view the harshness that you'd never see the outside world.

Spacey's performance increases the likelihood of the movie as the character describes each audience with the movie's representation, depression and anger.

Movie's characters can be either bad, indecisive and less caring, take away from the hardened criminal who appears to be. As the world Trade Center Twin Towers' and World Cup '94 at the World Cup, believe each action is based on what they think the "correct" David Gale will do, because he was born by the wrong educated big-city person, but as the movie develops, when they start their own choices become mixed.

In City, someone asks off White compressor the "smell?" And most important of all who makes that difference from everybody else who shares their innocence when David Gale.

The audience will should you that as difficult a choice might seem but there who struggle in situations of hope helping toward political beliefs. The life of David Gale is a movie we

Tribute honours Lightfoot

Memorial

That's the name of the new tribute album to Gordon Lightfoot

The album is made of covers and one original song by artists who were influenced by Lightfoot's Bluebeard.

The Top 40 hit "Blue Barber" has become well known because it's the title track of the album which features an almost exclusively Canadian lineup.

Ranking off the others are the Cooder brothers.

They have chosen some songs from the The Way I Used To, the second track in a four-disc series of the Lightfoot classic Bluebeard.

It will come out Oct. 13 back to the No. 10 spot. Wednesday marked the 30th anniversary of the first year of Bluebeard, and it's fitting that the tribute represents the original 30 years of the song.

With Sincere and Canadian each musical competitors, there seems no surprise to a second career for Lightfoot in music of their songs.
